

ABSTRACT

A new method is provided for the removal of solvents from exposed surfaces after an etch stop layer has been removed. Exposed surface are treated with a first plasma etch followed by a DI water rinse after which a second plasma etch of exposed surfaces is performed. By selecting the chemistry and the conditions for the first and the second plasma etch, polymer residues and formed copper oxide residues are removed from exposed surfaces.

1000503 130501